

Course Description: This course will cover the basic principles of genetics in the biological system. It will include Mendelian and non-Mendelian inheritance, chromosomal inheritance, and the molecular basis of inheritance. The topics covered in this course will vary with the instructor's preference.

Prerequisites: A grade of C or better in BIOL 101.

Credits: 2-4 credits

Course Description: This course is designed to provide students with a broad understanding of the principles of genetics. The course will cover the basic principles of genetics in the biological system. It will include Mendelian and non-Mendelian inheritance, chromosomal inheritance, and the molecular basis of inheritance. The topics covered in this course will vary with the instructor's preference. Students may use no more than two special topics.

Prerequisites: A grade of C or better in BIOL 101.

Course Description: This course is designed to provide students with a broad understanding of the principles of genetics. The course will cover the basic principles of genetics in the biological system. It will include Mendelian and non-Mendelian inheritance, chromosomal inheritance, and the molecular basis of inheritance. The topics covered in this course will vary with the instructor's preference.

Credits: 2-4 credits

Course Description: This course is designed to provide students with a broad understanding of the principles of genetics. The course will cover the basic principles of genetics in the biological system. It will include Mendelian and non-Mendelian inheritance, chromosomal inheritance, and the molecular basis of inheritance. The topics covered in this course will vary with the instructor's preference. Students may use no more than two special topics.

