Introduction to the study of the behavior of individuals and groups in organizations.

Students will learn the concepts of organizational behavior and how to apply them in the workplace.

Effect: Semester Fall 2018

This course serves as a capstone in the program management concentration. Material from previous classes is reviewed. The course provides a comprehensive review but is not a guaranteed success course in preparation for the capstone final examination. An additional course in program management is also presented.

This course was created as a MSW program concentration level assessment. It is a required course for the MSW program.
